By Associated Press.
Paris, September 29. — German casualties in the recent offensive of the French and British, including killed, wounded and prisoners, were given officially by the French War office today as in excess of the strength of three army corps (more than 120,000 men).
There is no interruption of the fighting in Champagne.
Progress of the French in the Aisne region, northwestern France, continues.
North of Massignes, the War Office says, 1,000 Germans surrendered.

Paris, September 29. — The Athens correspondent of the Havas News Agency says that it is now expected that Bulgaria will begin an attack on Serbia within 15 days.
Plans for the campaign are now being drawn up by the Bulgarian general staff, the correspondent says, with the assistance of numerous German officers, who have arrived in Sofia.
Bulgarian officers say no attack will be made on Greece.

London, September 29. — The British are battering the third line of the Germans in the vicinity of Loos. The French are maintaining their offensive in Champagne.
The Germans in the Argonne apparently have been unable to make important gains, and have refrained from infantry attacks.
This sums up briefly the situation in the west, as seen in London today.

England attaches high importance to indications that the offensive movement of the allies is not to be relaxed. A short breathing spell has been succeeded by the hardest pressure on German positions, at the points weakened or shattered by the allied rush.
That it is the intention to maintain this pressure, is indicated in a message from Field Marshal French. The British people believe a real test is planned, to determine whether German resistance in Belgium can be broken.

The Russians have not been doing so well in the last day or so. The Austrians have stemmed the Russian advance in southern Poland and retaken Lutsk.
The Germans are renewing the great movement against Dvinsk. The lessening for a time of German pressure on the northern half of the Russian front is believed in Petrograd to have been due, in part, to withdrawal of troops to reinforce German lines in the west.

Berlin, via Wireless to Sayville, L. I., September 29. — British and French troops, intended for service in Serbia, have been landed at Port Kathrin, near Saloniki, Greece, according to reports from Budapest.

received by a German newspaper, the Overseas News Agency announces today.

Berlin, via London, September 29. — Recapture from the British of a part of the territory won from the Germans north of Loos, was announced today by the War Office.
French attacks near Souchez and Neuville are said to have been "partly repulsed."
In the Champagne, French attempts to break through the German line are said to have been unsuccessful.

London, September 29. — "Three hundred thousand Austrian and German troops have begun an advance on the Serbian frontier in the direction of Orsova," says the Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

London, September 29. — German newspapers today announced that two generals, unnamed, have been dismissed from German command in the western war zone, in connection with the recent setback at the hands of the French and British, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company.
It is probable, the dispatch adds, that a new German commander-in-chief of the western armies will be appointed. In this connection the name of Field Marshal von Hindenburg is mentioned.

London, September 29. — The British have won an important success in Mesopotamia. The Turks are in full retreat toward Bagdad. The British are pursuing the retreating Turks. This was announced in the House of Commons today.

Paris, September 29. — "Bulgaria and the central powers have concluded a precise agreement, according to authoritative information," says the correspondent at Saloniki, Greece, of the Temps.
"Under this agreement Bulgaria will enter the war on October 15."

Paris, September 29. — A Havas dispatch from Athens says:
"The Bulgarian ministers of finance and commerce have resigned, according to a report received from a reliable source in Sofia."
"King Ferdinand granted an audience to former Premier Malinoff, leader of the party favorable to Russia, and asked him, it is understood, to form a new cabinet."

25,000 VETERANS MARCH IN REVIEW

By Associated Press.
Washington, September 29. — Historic Pennsylvania Avenue, up which the victorious Union army marched 50 years ago for review by President Andrew Johnson, was lined early today with thousands, who braved a sharp wind to see the remnant of that legion march from the capitol to the White House to be reviewed by President Wilson.

The grand parade and presidential review was the crowning event of the annual reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic. It was in commemoration of the grand review after the close of the civil war when 160,000 conquerors, of the army of the North, marched.
Today President Wilson greeted the survivors from the same spot where President Johnson stood. Estimates placed the number of veterans in line at from 20,000 to 30,000.
Pennsylvania Avenue was thronged with crowds rivalling inauguration times.
All government departments, public schools and practically all business houses were closed.

The line of march was from the Peace Monument up Pennsylvania Avenue, and through a court of honor erected in front of the White House.
At the head of the parade was Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, with distinguished army and navy officers as his aides.
Scenes of enthusiasm marked the passage of the veterans at President Wilson's stand. Frequently the president waved his hat.
The cheering in the reviewing stand in front of the White House was almost constant. Tired by the march, veterans looked exhausted when they reached the president's stand.
The parade was more than two hours in passing. As it progressed, some of the older veterans dropped from the lines.
The old soldiers marched nearly in the center of the broad avenue, while the ambulances spun along both sides.
Considering the advanced age of the men, there seemed few exhaustions.

NOTED JUDGE AND EDITOR PASSES AWAY

Circleville, Ohio, September 29. — Judge Aaron R. Van Cleef died here last night after a lingering illness, in his seventy-seventh year.
Judge Van Cleef was the senior Democratic editor in Ohio. He had attained many distinctions in his 77 years of life. His journalistic career began in 1859 and ended with his death.

For ten years he was a member of the Ohio Senate and he also served two terms in the House of Representatives, his career as a lawmaker extending from 1871 to 1893. During that time he voted upon the election of eight United States Senators in regular session and had part in choosing the successor to James A. Garfield when the latter was elected President and resigned his toga.

In local politics he had an unusual record. Elected a member of the Democratic County Committee of Pickaway County in 1864, he continued his connection with it until his death, omitting the year 1901. He was Chairman of the body from 1866, omitting a period of three years. In addition to serving as a member of the General Assembly he was Probate Judge of Pickaway county, being appointed to serve out an unexpired term, and being twice elected for terms of three years each.

Judge Van Cleef was a native of New Jersey. His birthplace was Armytown, and his natal day in the year 1838. When 21 years of age he came to Ohio and secured control of the Georgetown Democrat Standard at the seat of Brown County, a paper that was later called the Brown County News-Democrat. Later he went to Lebanon, the seat of Warren County, and bought the Democratic Citizen. His course, a vigorous one, drew upon him the vengeance of his political opponents and on the night of August 1, 1862, his plant was wrecked by a mob. It was rebuilt and May 1, 1863, he resumed publication.
In November of that year he removed to Circleville and bought the Democrat, which was named the Democratic Watchman. This he continued to publish until his death.

MOUNTAIN IS STRIPPED BY GERMAN ARTILLERY

Kipling Tells of Havoc Wrought by High Explosives in Alsace and How Villagers, Not Warned of Bombardment, Calmly Take Tea Amid Bursting Shells—Story Laid on Ground Where Bitter Fighting Rages Today.

We present below the fifth of six articles from the pen of Rudyard Kipling, under the general title of "France at War on the Frontier of Civilization," describing the impressions of a visit to the fighting line in France.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

[Copyright, 1915, by the Sun Printing and Publishing Association.]

VERY early in the morning I met Alan Brock with a half-headed bullet scrape across the bridge of his nose and an Alpine cap over one ear. His people a few hundred years ago had been Scotch. He bore a Scotch name and still recognized the head of his clan, but his French occasionally ran into German words, for he was Alsatian on one side.

"This," he explained, "is the very best country in the world to fight in. It is picturesque and full of cover. I'm a gunner. I've been here for months. It's lovely."

It might have been the hills under Mussoorie, and what our ears expected to do in it I could not understand, but our demon driver, who had been a road racer, took the seventy-horsepower Mercedes and threaded the narrow valleys as well as occasional half-Swiss villages full of Alpine troops at a restrained thirty miles an hour. He shot up a new-made road more like Mussoorie than ever and did not fall down the hillside even once. An ammunition mule of a mountain battery met him at a tight corner and began to climb a tree.

"There isn't another place in France where that could happen," said Alan. "I tell you this is a magnificent country."

The mule was hauled down by his tail after he had reached the lower branches and went on through the woods, his ammunition boxes jinking on his back for all the world as if he were rejoining his battery at Jutogh. One expected to meet the little hill people bent under their loads under the forest gloom. The light, the color, the smell of wood smoke, pine needles, wet earth and warm mule were all Himalayas. Only the Mercedes was violently and loudly a stranger.

Near the German Positions.

"Halt!" said Alan at last, when she had done everything except imitate the mule.

"The road continues," said the demon driver seductively.

"Yes, but they will hear you if you go on. Stop and wait. We've a mountain battery to look at."

They were not at work for a moment, and the commander, a grim, forceful man, showed me some details of their construction. When we left them in their bower it looked like a hill priest's wayside shrine. We heard them singing through the steep, descending pines. They, too, like the "75" men, seem to have no pet name in service.

It was a poisonously blind country. The woods blocked all sense of direction. Above and around the ground was at any angle you please, and all sounds were split up and muddled by the tree trunks, which acted as silencers. High above us the respectable, all-concealing forest had turned into sparse, ghastly blue sticks of timber—an assembly of leper trees around a bald mountain top.

"That's where we're going," said Alan. "Isn't it an adorable country?"

Shots Are Exchanged.

A machine gun loosed a few shots in the fumbling style of her kind when they feel for an opening. A couple of rifle shots answered. They might have been half a mile away or a hundred yards below.

An adorable country! We climbed up till we found once again a complete tea garden; little sunk houses almost invisible in the brown pink recesses of the thick forest. Here the trenches began, and with them for the next few hours life in two dimensions—length and breadth.

You could have eaten your dinner almost anywhere off the swept dry ground, for steep slopes favored draining. There was no lack of timber, and there was unlimited labor. It had made neat, double length dugouts, where the wounded could be laid during their passage down the mountainside; well lined occasional latrines, properly tended dugouts for sleeping and eating, overhead protections and tool sheds where needed and, as one came nearer the working face, very clever cellars to protect against trench sweepers.

Men passed on their business—a squad with a captured machine gun, which they tested in a sheltered dip; armors at their benches busy with sick rifles, fatigue parties for straw rations and ammunition, long processions of single blue figures turned sideways between brown, sunless walls. One understood after awhile the nightmare that lays hold of trench stale men until the dreamer, watching seemingly forever in those blind mazes, finds himself after agonizing centuries out again in the white blaze and horror of the mined front.

There were no trees above us now. Their trunks lay along the edge of the trench, built in with stones where necessary, or sometimes overhanging it in ragged splinters or bushy tops. Bits of cloth not French showed too in the uneven line of debris at the trench tip, and some thoughtful soul had marked an unexpected boche trench sweeper as not to be touched. It was a young lawyer from Paris who pointed that out to me.

Devastation Everywhere.

We met the colonel at the head of an indescribable pit of ruin, full of sunshine, whose steps ran down a very steep hillside under the lee of an almost vertically plunging parapet. To the left of that parapet the whole hillside was one gruel of smashed trees, split stones and powdered soil. It might have been a ragpicker's dump heap on a colossal scale. Alan looked at it critically. I think he had helped make it not long before.

"We are on the top of the hill now, and the boches are below," said he. "We gave them a very fair sickener lately."

"This," said the colonel, "is the front line."

There were overhead guards against hand bombs, which disposed me to believe him, but what convinced me most was a corporal urging us in whispers not to talk so loud. The men were at dinner, and a good smell of food filled the trench. This was the first smell I had encountered in my long travels up hill—a mixed, entirely wholesome flavor of stew, leather, earth and rifle oil. A proportion of men were standing to arms while others ate, but dinner time is slack time even among animals, and it was close to noon.

Boches Get Their Soup.

"The boches got their soup a few days ago," some one whispered. I thought of pulverized hillside and hoped it had been hot enough.

We edged along the still trench where the soldiers stared with justified contempt. I thought, upon the civilian who scuttled through their life for a few emotional minutes in order to make words out of their blood. It reminded me of coming in late to a play and incommencing the long line of packed stalls. The whispered dialogue was much the same.

"Pardon; I beg your pardon, monsieur. To the right, monsieur. If monsieur will lower his head, one sees best from here, monsieur."

It was their day and night long business, carried through without display or heat or doubt or indecision.

Those off duty not five feet behind in the dugout were deep in their papers or their meals or their letters.

The Street to Millwood

It has been a pleasure for the people of this city, during the last two years, to contemplate the splendid work of the city council and the organizations of public spirited citizens, working together and in harmony, to bring about much needed public improvements. There has been much, in combined activities to praise and little or nothing to criticise. The results attained have been wonderfully satisfactory.

In the matter of securing the new union depot, the absolute need for which has long been acknowledged universally, it seems possible that the city council has moved with a little too much haste.

Everyone here wants the union depot and is content to have it located in that plot of land which now is a part of Paint street.

Before that portion of Paint street, necessary for depot purposes, however, was formally granted to the railroad, which means the closing up of that street, so far as the very necessary connecting link between the Millwood section and the uptown section of the city are concerned, some arrangement should have been made to provide a means for travel between the sections mentioned.

It is not wise for authorities acting finally upon such important matters to rely upon individual promises or assurances that the rights of the public will be provided for. In such instances the new rights of the public should be absolutely secured before a present right is bartered away, no matter how valuable the consideration received may be. The Millwood section is too important in the commercial and social life of the city to be cut off from it or even seriously inconvenienced in the necessary travels of its residents.

No one has any desire, at this time, to criticise the action of council even in the matter of the land grant for the new depot, but that other very necessary arrangement for that populous and prosperous section of the city the residents of which have traveled over the street proposed to be abandoned should have been made.

Before going much further every effort should be directed to the work of providing a thoroughfare between the city proper and Millwood.

The Allies Begin Attack

The great offensive drive of the allied armies of the English, Belgians and French on the western battle fronts of Europe has at last begun and marked advantages have been gained over the Teutonic forces.

The loss of men sustained by both contending forces has been terrific. Great numbers of prisoners have been taken by both forces, a large number of German guns were captured by the allies and some considerable amount of ammunition also passed under their control.

The most significant feature of the terrific fighting resulting from the offensive movements of the allies was the comparative ease with which the German trenches were taken. Those who contended that the armies of the central powers were secure from attack by reason of their extensive earth works must acknowledge themselves to have been mistaken. Under the furious bombardment of the allies directed against the entrenchments of the Germans, the forces of the Kaiser were, early in the fighting, compelled to retire.

The fighting in the west is an added proof of the contention that the present war is one of big guns and that fortifications are of little avail as against a direct attack by heavy artillery.

Germany's successes in Belgium, France, Galicia, Poland and Russia are directly attributable to the heavy artillery attacks against which the strongest fortifications crumble into ruins.

It remained for the allies, by an offensive attack in the west, to demonstrate by a concentration of heavy artillery fire, that the most elaborate system of entrenchments are equally useless as a protection to the infantrymen.

The fighting of Monday was the most desperate of the present year and of the war, save only, possibly the offensive movements of the Germans in France last summer and the counter offensive of the allies before which the German forces were compelled to abandon their campaign to take Paris and retreat almost to the borders of Germany.

LITTLE IRISH GIRL.

As I went out one evening
From Tipperary town,
I met a little colleen
Among the heather brown.
"Ah," says I, "perhaps you're lonely?"
She tossed her pretty curl,
"Well, maybe, I prefer it!"
Och! the dear little girl.

Says I, "Perhaps you're married?"
Says she "Perhaps I'm not!"
Says I, "I'll be your gosssoon."
Says she, "I'll not be caught."
"Oh! your eyes are like the ocean,
And your heart is like a pearl!"
Says she, "Well, then I'll keep it!"
Och! the dear little girl.

Says I, "I've got a cabin
And pigs that number seven,
And oh! with you, mavourneen,
Sure the place would be like heaven."
Her eyes looked up in mine then,
My heart was in a whirl,
The little pigs had done it!
Och! the dear little girl.

GROWERS OF COTTON ARE CONTENTED

Washington, Sept. 29. — Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, who has been devoting himself to safeguarding American cotton interests in the war situation, called on Acting Secretary of State Polk. Following the conference, the senator declared that the position of the cotton grower at present was satisfactory. He said that for the 12,000,000 bales of cotton raised this year the cotton growers would receive very much more than for the 16,000,000 bales grown last year. The senator expressed the view that after the submarine controversy with Germany had been completely cleared away the administration would act vigorously with reference to the British interference with American trade.

Cheer up! Remember that if the sun shone all the time there would be no hay to make.

It doesn't make your task any lighter, but you always get a lot of satisfaction out of telling how hard you work.

Why is it that the man who cheerfully uses a comb and brush that are chained in a public wash room always gets mad when he discovers that his wife or his children have been using his comb?

What has become of the old fashioned tomboy who could outrun all the boys in the neighborhood?

When mother starts telling the children about the good times she had before she was married she glares at father as if she had caught him setting fire to an orphan asylum.

This is a great country. But it contains too many grown people who do not know how to spell.

Any old time a man gets up and fixes his own breakfast he isn't doing it because he loves his wife, but because he is mad at her.

What has become of the old fashioned girl who used to wear white shoes in summer?

Anyway, the man who hasn't any screens in his bedroom windows never needs an alarm clock to wake him up early in the morning.

If sleeping with gloves on keeps the hands soft we know a lot of men who sleep with their hats on.

When you are selecting a girl for your wife because she has a pretty face always remember that the beauty that doesn't fade will rub off.

The OIL makes the leather soft and the shoe comfortable.

The WAX makes the shoe shine with a shine that lasts.

DUMBA IS RECALLED

Washington, Sept. 29.—Dr. Constantine Dumba, Austro-Hungarian ambassador, has been recalled. His government has responded to the complete satisfaction of the United States government's demand for his removal from Washington, and officials here regard the incident entirely closed. Dr. Dumba will sail from New York on Oct. 5. Announcement of Dr. Dumba's recall was received at the state department in a dispatch from Ambassador Penfield at Vienna, reporting a conversation he had last week with Foreign Minister Burian. Acting Secretary of State Polk stated that the department has requested the British and French ambassadors here to provide a safe conduct for Ambassador Dumba, informing them that the ambassador had been recalled by his government.

No mention was made by the foreign minister in his talks with Ambassador Penfield of any successor to Dr. Dumba. However, it is not doubted that in a reasonable time the name of a successor to Dr. Dumba will be submitted to the United States government.

DEEPLY INTERESTED IN TRADE DRAWING EVENTS

Success of Fall Festivals in Adjoining Towns Is Expected to Result in the Holding of Monster Carnival or "Farmers' Festival" in This City Next Fall.

Many local business and professional men have been watching with no little interest the success of the various Fall Festivals which have been held in adjoining towns and cities, and will also watch with equal interest the results in other cities where fall festivals are now under way or will be launched within the next few days.

And it is expected that, in all probability, Washington will hold a fall festival next season which will be equal to any held in other Ohio cities, and that Washington for one solid week will be the mecca for thousands of visitors, including many new shoppers who mayhap have not yet become familiar with the splendid advantages the local shops possess.

The matter of a festival or carnival was discussed by the Dutch Treat Club a few weeks ago, but it was deemed inadvisable at that late a day to plan a carnival such as was desired, and it was more than hinted that plans would be taken up early next year so that the farmers could plan for the biggest and best of everything, for which liberal prizes would be awarded.

LOCAL DEGREE STAFF TO GIVE DRILL IN XENIA

Acceptance of the request of the degree team of the Washington C. H. I. O. O. F. lodge that they be allowed to give a public drill made one more valuable addition for the Fall Festival program and made up the chief item of business that was transacted at the regular meeting of the fall festival committee which was held Monday night in the association rooms.

The request from the Washington lodge was referred to the program committee with the recommendation that it be staged on Friday afternoon, following the other lodge celebration. This exhibition of Fayette County lodge is looked upon as a valuable feature as they are recognized to be the finest degree team in the state. They will not enter any of the competitive contests, their presence being volunteered and it was readily accepted. What their plans are was not disclosed but a request was made for fifty feet of space.—Xenia Gazette.

MRS. CHAS. ACTON WILL FACE JURY

Mrs. Charles Acton, charged with arson, is one of the persons who will come before the Ross county grand jury next week. Her husband, Charles Acton, also was indicted but he is now serving a term in the pen-

Regarding the recent "Farmers' Fall Festival" held in Chillicothe, the Chillicothe News tells of the great success, as follows:

"The unanimous opinion of local exhibitors at the Fall Festival is that this event is the best thing for town and county that has ever been suggested and carried out. There have been a few people, mostly those who did not turn a hand or spend a dollar to boost the festival, who, during the early part of the week, went about proclaiming that fall festivals were 'played out.' By the end of the week even these were silent, if not convinced, for they found that general opinion was against them and enthusiastically in favor of the festival idea.

"Three years of festivals have proved their practical value. Not a visitor from other cities but commended it and saw what it was doing for the city.

"In Chillicothe the business men who exhibited are all thoroughly pleased with the result. Setting aside the fact that the week's business was fine, they all emphasize the fact that the festival affords a chance for them to welcome old patrons and to make possible new ones. They see distinctly a better feeling between town and county growing directly from such meetings brought about by the festivals. Old friends who had drifted away are coming back and new ones are made. While there are suggestions for possible improvements, there was an unanimous opinion that the Farmers' Fall Festival must be repeated next year, bigger and better."

Itentary on a charge of arson. Mrs. Acton has been held in Ross county since she was arrested in this city at the time her husband was ordered out of town.

Bert and John Eubanks, Highland county wool thieves, also come up for investigation on a charge of stealing wool.

George Nagle is the last man bound over, the charge against him being that of cutting with intent to kill Frank Nevin.

GREAT PROGRESS MADE ON STREET

Much progress has been made on the paving of West Court street, during the past day or two, and the brick have all been laid from the intersection of Hinde street to the bridge over Paint creek.

The work of laying the brick between the rails of the C. H. & D. and D. T. & I. railroads required considerable skill.

The railroad crossings on West Court street, of which there are four, will be equal to the crossings on South Main and Fayette streets.

TURNS OVER ROADS TO SUPT. GROVE

County Highway Superintendent Grove is in receipt of a communication from the State Highway Commissioner in which he is notified to take charge of all the roads in the county under control of the state, and to superintend them subject to instructions from the State Highway Department.

The roads in question include the brick highways and the Devalon road.

At the next meeting of the county commissioners the salary of the Highway Superintendent's office will be decided upon. In Pickaway county the salary, computed as required by law, totals $1725 per annum.

FINE PHOTO PLAY DELIGHTS AUDIENCES

The Palace Theater played to crowded houses Tuesday night, when an all-star Vitagraph cast put on "The Island of Regeneration."

Its claim of being the highest priced feature ever shown in this city was backed by its wonderfully beautiful and spectacular settings laid in the southern Pacific, and its intensely exciting and out of the ordinary drama. The leading parts were superbly acted by Edith Storey and Antonio Marino, well supported.

This afternoon's matinee was well patronized and the Palace will undoubtedly be packed tonight, the last chance to see this film.

FALL SALE OF WIDE INTEREST

The Spring Hill farm annual fall sale of improved Durocs will be held at the farm on Tuesday, October the fifth, in charge of Mrs. Hugh K. Stewart and Miss Martin, Ex. estate of the late Hugh K. Stewart.

Catalogs have been sent out in which the announcement is made that it was the wish of Mr. Stewart to have the large number of high class Durocs on the farm at the time of his death disposed of as had been previously arranged, in two sales—this fall sale of open gilts and spring boars, and a closing out sale, February 1st, 1916.

Most of this offering is sired by Col. S. Jr., the intensely bred boar that was sold for $2500 at the last Spring Hill farm sale.

Miss Martin has been actively associated with Mr. Stewart in the conduct of former sales and she and Mrs. Stewart are thoroughly competent to manage the sale which promises to be an enormous one with the outlook for the coming season and the demand for high bred improved Durocs.

Spring Hill farm has a national reputation and buyers will attend from all over the country.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NOW WELL UNDER WAY

The work of erecting the new Episcopal church in this city is well under way, the material arriving this week and the work of erecting the structure being taken up immediately.

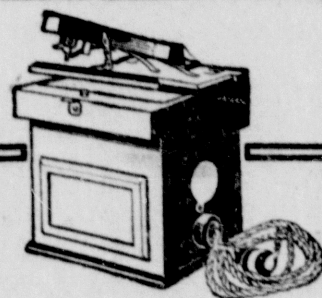

The material for the structure is in sections and the work of putting it together requires little time, and it is expected that by Sunday the building will be completed and ready for services.

Practically all of the building is of sheet steel and so constructed that each section fits perfectly in place, and when all are assembled, the structure is tight, attractive, and very serviceable.

MEMOIR.

Caroline Seifried was born in Lancaster, Ohio, July 30, 1846. Her parents, Adam and Barbara Seifried, were well known residents of that town. She was married in 1866 to William Hettessheimer, and for forty-five years has lived in Washington C. H.

Of the children three survive—William, Mrs. Addie Short and Mrs. Louise Clark. Also a sister, Mrs. Louisa Eberly of Lancaster, Ohio and a niece, Mrs. Charles Johnson, of this town.

Of Lutheran parentage, Mrs. Hettessheimer was baptized and confirmed in the Evangelical Lutheran church of Lancaster. On removing to Washington Court House she united with Grace Methodist Episcopal church, and until her death was a loyal and devoted member.

Mrs. Hettessheimer was in every sense of the word a mother. In rare measure she possessed the mother spirit. Her devotion to her children and grandchildren was notable. The little duties of the home engaged much of her time and her fidelity to the daily task was bravely met. She was cheerful by nature, and patient under the burdens of life.

When sickness came she met it with the same unflinching spirit. No complaint escaped her lips. Her faith was strong, her hope bright. As her strength failed she gathered courage for the great adventure. Again and again she spoke of the Savior's presence and the heavenly home. She met the last summons without fear or misgiving, and in perfect trust she fell asleep in Jesus in the full assurance of faith.

ALLIES ASSURED IMMENSE CREDIT

American Financiers to Furnish Half Billion.

AGREEMENT IS ANNOUNCED

Money to Remain in the United States and Be Utilized in Steady Foreign Exchange Between This Country and Great Britain and France—Statement of the Anglo-French Commissioners.

New York, Sept. 29.—Sir Henry Pabington Smith, member of the Anglo-French mission, made formal announcement of the agreement of American financiers to furnish $500,000,000 whereby foreign exchange between the United States and England and France is to be maintained at normal figures. It came in the form of a statement from the lord chief justice of England, Baron Reading, who is now in Chicago.

The announcement, which was supplemented later by a statement from J. P. Morgan & Co., sets forth in brief:

"An underwriting syndicate of bankers and individual financiers from all sections of the country is to supply a credit to the two countries of $480,000,000, which is to remain in the United States, to be utilized solely for the purpose of keeping the foreign exchange at the normal price. In return, the two countries are to issue joint and several bonds due in five years, bearing 5 per cent interest, for the full amount of $500,000,000. The price at which these bonds are to be sold to the investor will be 98 and the price at which the syndicate is to receive them is 96, making the interest return to the investor about 5.5 per cent, the premium to the investor being $10,000,000 and the commission to the syndicate being $10,000,000 more.

One of the first questions asked

was as to the participation of Russia in the loan, and the reply was that she does not appear as a party or a participant. The next was in regard to munitions. The answer was that the money is to be used exclusively for the purpose of stabilizing exchange; that is, preventing bills drawn on foreign countries from depreciating. This meant any and all bills that might be drawn. It would mean the wheat bills, the cotton bills, as well as bills on manufactures.

It has not yet been decided definitely how many payments will cover the loan. They are to be arranged for upon calculation of how often they will be needed. It was explained that 25 per cent might be required with the subscription, more or less.

It is intended to have a group in every center of three countries, where one can be organized, to handle the loan. New York city will be the center of the groups, and so far forty banking institutions have signified their willingness to join. Bonds in denomination as low as $100 will be offered.

BANK BOYCOTT IS THREATENED

Washington, Sept. 29.—A boycott of banks participating in the $500,000,000 loan to the allies is proposed in a statement issued by the executive committee of the National Industrial Peace conference, of which former Representative Fowler of Illinois is chairman. The movement is also endorsed by G. F. Hummel of Chicago, representing the Business Men's Peace association.

HORSEMAN MISSING

Delaware, O., Sept. 29.—Police were asked to search for C. H. Blair, sixty, well known Ohio horseman, who disappeared from his home here. On leaving home Blair told his wife he was to meet a business associate.

WIRE FLASHES

C. W. Fawcett heads Democratic ticket for mayor of Ottawa, O., in place of T. F. McElroy, who withdrew. Eighteen-year-old Alice Joyce Borden of Chicago is America's most recent girl millionaire. She has just come into her father's estate.

At Cleveland, Conlton Houlett, seventeen, carrying mail sacks, was wounded in the leg when a loaded revolver inside a pouch exploded.

Four workmen were killed and half a dozen or more injured at Phoenixville, Pa., when a Reading railroad passenger train ran into a score of workmen in a tunnel.

Because her husband's relatives concealed from her before their marriage that her husband stuttered, Mrs. Maria Locasti of New York has begun suit for divorce.

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK SHIP

New York, Sept. 29.—An apparent attempt to blow up the liner San Guglielmo, which sailed from Brooklyn with 1,700 Italian reservists and a cargo of war munitions, is being investigated. Shortly before the vessel left her pier eight sticks of dynamite, each five inches long and an inch thick, sufficient to destroy the ship, were discovered under a pile of sack- ing by Leo Pavone, head dock clerk.

SLIGHT SKIRMISH

Washington, Sept. 29.—Another skirmish between American marines and Haitians was reported to the navy department by Rear Admiral Caperton, commanding. One cacao chief was killed in the fighting, which occurred near Cape Haitien.

AFTER LOAFERS

Marion, O., Sept. 29.—Loafers who refuse to cut corn at $2 a day and board will be sent to the workhouse. This edict was issued by Mayor Don Brockett. Farmers say their corn has reached a stage where it must be cut immediately to save the fodder, and they are unable to get corn cutters.

BRYAN DECLARES HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Stoutly Opposes Proposed Loan to the Allies.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 29.—William J. Bryan declared here that he would not seek the Democratic presidential nomination next year, that he was undecided about going to Europe as private peace envoy, and he strongly opposed the proposed loan of $500,000,000 or any other sum to finance Great Britain and France.

"I am not a candidate and will not be a candidate for the nomination," Mr. Bryan said with a tone of finality that left no doubt that neither does he expect to seek the nomination nor does he expect the nomination to seek him. Then he added: "I regard it as entirely too early to discuss the next national convention of the Democratic party."

Mr. Bryan then spoke in opposition to the loan to the allies: "It would not be wise for our country to give encouragement to a war loan on either side. In the first place, it tends to give the influential element in our country a pecuniary interest in the success of the side to which the loan is made, and as they naturally want to protect their investments, it throws their influence against that neutrality which our government is bound to preserve. The money that is invested in these bonds will be withdrawn from the money available for investment in other things and will tend to make money scarce in some sections. As a matter of business, it is hardly to be expected that our people will take war risks that were refused by the people in Europe."

EXPLOSION WRECKS ITALIAN BATTLESHIP

Admiral and Hundreds of Crew Lose Lives.

Rome, Sept. 29.—The first class Italian battleship Benedetto Brin was literally torn to pieces by an internal explosion while lying at anchor in the harbor at Brindisi. Only 378 men and eight officers of her entire complement of 720 were saved. This makes the casualty list total 342 officers and men. Rear Admiral Rubin de Celvin, who was in command of the ship, is among the dead.

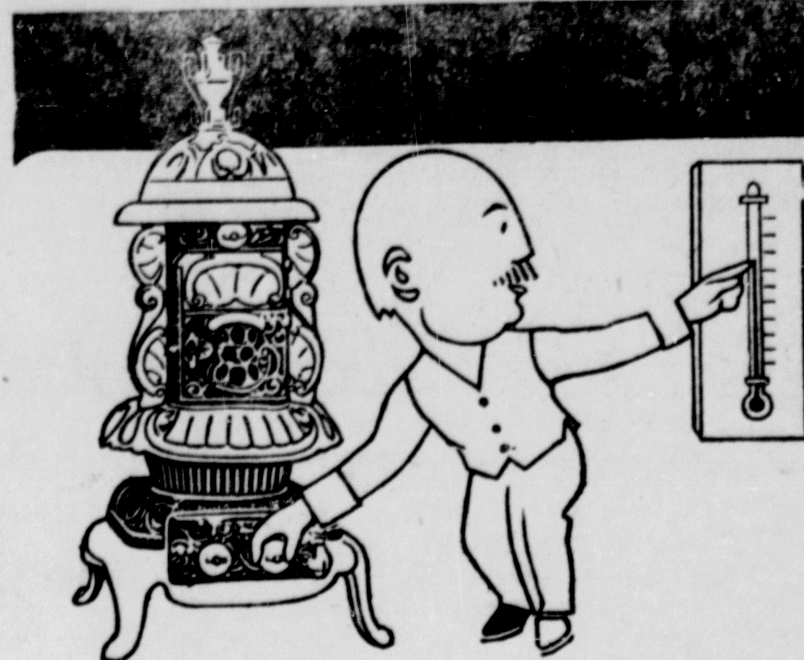

The admiralty, in briefly announcing the accident, dispels all suspicion that a hostile submarine may have been responsible for the explosion by revealing that it was due to a slight internal fire which reached the magazines before it could be extinguished. There was no time, however, for warning to be given the men, and no attempt was made to lower boats. An enormous detonation sounded; the boat split open, a cloud of smoke shot into the air, and a few minutes later the spot where the Benedetto Brin had been riding was marked only by struggling bodies and floating debris.

The battleship Benedetto Brin was a vessel of 13,427 tons and in peace times carried a complement of 720 men. She was completed in 1904 at a cost of $5,750,000. The battleship, which was of the predreadnaught class, carried four 12-inch, four 8-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, twenty 12-pounders, two 1-pounders and two Maxims. She also was armed with four torpedo tubes. The vessel had a speed of about 20.5 knots. Rear Admiral Baron Ernesto Rubin de Celvin was in command of the vessel.

Estate Oak

For this remarkable heater is as easy as a steam radiator to control. Just a twist of the wrist on the patented screw draft registers tells the flame which way to go.

This wouldn't be possible unless the stove were absolutely air-tight, and it isn't possible to have an absolutely air-tight stove without the Jointless Ash-Box—an exclusive feature of Estate Oak construction.

Don't you think it would be nice to "Own an Estate"—much nicer than having your stove own you? You can really own an Estate Stove—it will obey your slightest command.

REPUBLICANS WILL SUPPORT GERRYMANDER

Columbus, Sept. 29.—Under the direction of Chairman Edwin Jones the Republican state executive committee will make an organized and vigorous campaign to sustain the Sprague congressional redistricting law, which the Democratic state organization, by petition, has subjected to referendum vote. This determination was reached at a meeting in Republican state headquarters, attended by Republicans from each of the twenty-two congressional districts.

In a statement Chairman Jones said: "The Democratic organization has caused a referendum to be taken on this measure to the exclusion of all other acts passed by the general assembly, thus making the issue one of a strictly partisan character. It was unanimously determined to accept the challenge of the Democratic organization."

Pressmen Meet.

Columbus, Sept. 29.—Plans are now under way for the organization of a state league of pressmen, linking the 5,000 or more pressmen of Ohio into a body independent of the international federation, and a permanent association will be perfected at a meeting in Columbus Oct. 16 and 17. One of the principal purposes of organizing the league is to establish a state labor exchange for pressmen.

VILNA DEFENDERS ESCAPE GERMAN

Escape Trap With Loss of Twenty Thousand Men.

BERLIN LIFTS THE VEIL.

Russians in Full Retreat Along the Entire Front. Following the Breaking Down of the Czar's Offensive at Volhynia Fortress Triangle—Allies
Make Gains on the Western Front.
Day's Operations.

London, Sept. 29.—An official report says that in the heavy fighting around Loos the British have taken exceptionally strong German lines of trenches and bomb-proof shelters several hundred yards in extent. Having taken the German second line, the British are now after the third line of trenches.

London, Sept. 29.—The German war office announces officially that General Von Elchorn captured in the battle of Vilna 21,908 men and 70 officers, not including the figures previously reported.

This lifts the veil of mystery that has been concealing the fate of the Russian Vilna army ever since Field Marshal Von Hindenburg's army pierced the heart of the railroad system in western Russia.

Supplementing this statement, the official Berlin report asserts the battle "led to the enemy's being repulsed across the Lake Maroz-Smogon-Wischnew line."

The deduction from the above statement is: That the czar's Vilna
army did escape the Teuton trap.
Moreover, it escaped in the very nick of time, for as the German statement shows, the retreat was not made, as had been generally believed, over the southern line of the Vilna-Lida-Modischno rail triangle, but over the northern road, in a desperate successful race with the German army in the immediate reach and, at times, in partial control of that road.

The Vilna army was estimated at a minimum of 300,000, of which 250-000 escaped. If of this number 20,000 men are still fighting rear guard actions, insuring the retreat of the bulk, the number of those who are actually safe from Hindenburg's gigantic spears will still be nearly 250,000.

Aside from the important advice concerning the Vilna army, the outstanding feature of the official German war bulletin is the claim that the Russian offensive in the Volhynian fortress triangle, which began on the very day Emperor Nicholas assumed supreme command of his ar-meds, has been completely broken.

while death stood ready every minute to drop down into the narrow cut from out of the narrow strip of unconcerned sky.

The Germans in Sight.

And for the better part of a week
one had skirted miles of such a frieze.
The loopholes not in use were plugged rather like old fashioned hives. Said
the colonel, removing a plug:
"Here are the boches. Look and you'll see their sandbags."

Through the jumble of riven trees and stones one saw what might have been a bit of green sacking.

"They're about seven meters dis-

Stillness Really Uncanny.

The uncanny thing was the absence of movement in the boche trenches.
Sometimes one imagined that one smelt strange tobacco or heard a rifle bolt working after a shot; otherwise they were as still as a pig at noonday.

We held on through the maze, past trench sweepers of handy, light pattern, with their screw tailed charge all ready and a grave or so, and when I came on men who merely stood within easy reach of their rifles I knew I was in the second line. When they lay frankly at ease in their dugouts I knew it was the third. A shotgun would have sprinkled all three.

"No flat plains," said Alan: "no hunting for gun positions. The hills are full of them and trenches close together and commanding each other. You see what a beautiful country it is."

The colonel confirmed this, but from another point of view war was his business, as the still woods could res-tify. But his hobby was his trenches.
He had tapped mountain streams and dug out a laundry where a man could wash his shirt and go up and be killed in it all in a morning, had drained trenches so muddy that to stretch in them was an offense, and at the bottom of the hill it looked like a hydropathic establishment on the stage. He had created baths where a half battalion at a time could wash.

Didn't Tell of Past Battles.

He never told me how all that country had been fought over as fiercely
as Ypres in the west nor what blood had gone down the valleys before his trenches were pushed over the scalped mountain top. No, he stretched out new endeavors in earth and stones and trees for the comfort of his men on that populous mountain, and there came a priest who was a sublieutenant out of a wood of snuff brown shadows and half veiled trunks.

Would it please me to look at a chapel? It was all open to the hillside, most tenderly and devoutly done in rustic work with readings of peeled branches and panels of moss and thatch—St. Hubert's own shrine. I saw the hunters who passed before it going to the chase on the far side of the mountain where their game lay.

Alan carried me off to tea the same evening in a town where he seemed to know everybody. He had spent the afternoon on another mountain top inspecting gun positions whereby he had been shelled—"a little marmite," is slang for it—and he had spotted a boche position which was marmiteable.

"And we may get shelled now," he added hopefully. "They shell this town whenever they think of it. Perhaps they'll shell us at tea."

It was a quaintly beautiful little place with its mixture of French and German ideas, its old bridge and gentle minded river between cultivated hills.
The sandbagged cellar doors, the paved houses and the holes in the pavement looked as unreal as violence of a cinema against that soft and simple setting.

Bursting Shells Are Warnings.

The people were abroad in the streets,
and the little children were playing.
A big shell gives notice enough for one
to get shelter if shelter is near enough.
That appears to be as much as any one expects in a world where one is shelled,
and that world had settled down to it.
The people's lips are a little firmer,
the modeling of the brows is a little more pronounced, and maybe there is a change in the expression of the eyes,
but nothing that the casual afternoon
caller need particularly notice.

The house where we took tea was the big house of the place, old and massive, a treasure house of ancient furniture. It had everything that the heart of moderate man could desire—gardens, garages, outbuildings and the air of peace that goes with beauty in age. It stood over a high cellarage, and opposite the cellar door was a brand new blindage of earth packed between timbers.

Tea During Bombardment.

The cellar was a hospital with its beds and stores, and under the electric light the orderly waited, ready for cases to be carried down out of the streets.

"Yes, they are all civil cases," said
he. "They come without much warning—a woman gashed by falling timber, a child with its temple crushed by a flying stone, an urgent amputation case, and so on. One never knows."

Bombardment, the boche textbooks say, is designed to terrify the civil population so that they may put pressure on their politicians to conclude a peace.
In real life men are very rarely soothed by the sight of their women being tortured.

We took tea in the house upstairs with a propriety and an interchange of compliments that suited the little occasion. There was no attempt to disguise the existence of the bombardment, but it was not allowed to over-weigh talk of lighter matters. I know one guest who sat through it as near as might be inarticulate with wonder, but he was English, and when Alan asked him whether he had enjoyed himself he said, "Oh, yes, thank you, very much."

"Nice people, aren't they?" Alan went on.
"Oh, very nice—and such good tea." He managed to convey a few of his sentiments to Alan after dinner.
"But what else could the people have done?" said he. "They are French."

WILSON HONORS BRAVE

Lessons Drawn From Strife
Of the Sixties.

SURVIVORS IN REVIEW

Thousands at the National Capital
Witness the Grand Army Parade, Which Is Reviewed Also by the President—General Nelson A. Miles a Conspicuous Figure—Exercises of the Day.

Washington, Sept. 29.—While President Wilson was making a speech to about 2,000 persons inside Camp Matthew Emory, 10,000 veterans of the civil war and other visitors to the G.
A. R. encampment outside the building clamored for admission. This situation resulted from some confusion of the local arrangements and misunderstanding on the part of veterans and their friends. President Wilson was compelled to suspend when he was half way through his speech on account of disorders in the rear of the hall caused by a demonstration by those outside that they be admitted.
Colonel David J. Palmer, commander in chief of the G. A. R., introduced the president amid thunderous cheering and informed him that the veterans stood solidly behind the administration's conduct of the present-day foreign problems, and that their sons would support him in any steps he might take.

The president spoke in part as follows:

"The nation in which you live is not the nation for whose union you fought. You have seen many things which have made this nation one of the representative nations of the world with regard to the modern spirit of that world, and you have the satisfaction, which I dare say few others ever had, of looking upon a war absolutely unique in this, that instead of destroying it healed, that instead of making a permanent division
it made it permanent union. This nation was from the beginning a spiritual enterprise, and you have seen the spirits of the two once divided sections of this country adequately united. A war which seemed as if it had the seed of every kind of bitterness in it has in a single generation put bitterness absolutely out of its heart, and you feel, as I am sure the men who fought against you feel, that you were comrades even then, though you did not know it, and that now you know that you are comrades in a common love for a country which you are equally eager to serve.

"This is a miracle of the spirit so far as national history is concerned.
This is one of the very few wars in which in one sense everybody engaged may take pride."

The great parade of the civil war veterans was today's spectacular feature. Thousands of veterans were in line and spectators who jammed the streets generously applauded the paraders. The president reviewed the parade from a stand erected on the White House grounds. General Nelson
A. Miles was the chief figure in the parade, which passed down Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol to the White House.

Teutons Fail to Stop Advance of the Allies

Desperate Counter Attacks of the Germans Fail to Stop Impetuous Charges of French and British at Various Points Along Great Battle Front.

ALLIES LAND TROOPS IN GREECE BULGARIA TO ATTACK SERBIA OCT. 15

Three Hundred Thousand Teutons Advance on Serb Frontier—German Generals in West May Give Way to Hindenburg—German Casualties in West Exceed 120,000—British Drive Turks Back Toward Bagdad—Bulgarian Ministers Resign—Germans Busy in East.

By Associated Press.
Paris, September 29. — German casualties in the recent offensive of the French and British, including killed, wounded and prisoners, were given officially by the French War office today as in excess of the strength of three army corps (more than 120,000 men).

There is no interruption of the fighting in Champagne.

Progress of the French in the Aisne region, northwestern France, continues.

North of Massignes, the War Office says, 1,000 Germans surrendered.

Paris, September 29. — The Athens correspondent of the Havas News Agency says that it is now expected that Bulgaria will begin an attack on Serbia within 15 days.

Plans for the campaign are now being drawn up by the Bulgarian general staff, the correspondent says, with the assistance of numerous German officers, who have arrived in Sofia.

Bulgarian officers say no attack will be made on Greece.

London, September 29. — The British are battering the third line of the Germans in the vicinity of Loos.

The French are maintaining their offensive in Champagne.

The Germans in the Argonne apparently have been unable to make important gains, and have refrained from infantry attacks.

This sums up briefly the situation in the west, as seen in London today.

England attaches high importance to indications that the offensive movement of the allies is not to be relaxed.

A short breathing spell has been succeeded by the hardest pressure on German positions, at the points weakened or shattered by the allied rush.

That it is the intention to maintain this pressure, is indicated in a message from Field Marshal French.

The British people believe a real test is planned, to determine whether German resistance in Belgium can be broken.

The Russians have not been doing so well in the last day or so. The Austrians have stemmed the Russian advance in southern Poland and retaken Lutsk.

The Germans are renewing the great movement against Dvinsk. The lessening for a time of German pressure on the northern half of the Russian front is believed in Petrograd to have been due, in part, to withdrawal of troops to reinforce German lines in the west.

Berlin, via Wireless to Sayville, L. I., September 29. — British and French troops, intended for service in Serbia, have been landed at Port Kathrin, near Saloniki, Greece, according to reports from Budapest.

received by a German newspaper, the Overseas News Agency announces today.

Berlin, via London, September 29. — Recapture from the British of a part of the territory won from the Germans north of Loos, was announced today by the War Office.

French attacks near Souchez and Neuville are said to have been "partly repulsed."

In the Champagne, French attempts to break through the German line are said to have been unsuccessful.

London, September 29. — "Three hundred thousand Austrian and German troops have begun an advance on the Serbian frontier in the direction of Orsova," says the Athens correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company.

London, September 29. — German newspapers today announced that two generals, unnamed, have been dismissed from German command in the western war zone, in connection with the recent setback at the hands of the French and British, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company.

It is probable, the dispatch adds, that a new German commander-in-chief of the western armies will be appointed. In this connection the name of Field Marshal von Hindenburg is mentioned.

London, September 29. — The British have won an important success in Mesopotamia. The Turks are in full retreat toward Bagdad. The British are pursuing the retreating Turks. This was announced in the House of Commons today.

Paris, September 29. — "Bulgaria and the central powers have concluded a precise agreement, according to authoritative information," says the correspondent at Saloniki, Greece, of the Temps.

"Under this agreement Bulgaria will enter the war on October 15."

Paris, September 29. — A Havas dispatch from Athens says:

"The Bulgarian ministers of finance and commerce have resigned, according to a report received from a reliable source in Sofia."

"King Ferdinand granted an audience to former Premier Malinoff, leader of the party favorable to Russia, and asked him, it is understood, to form a new cabinet."

By Associated Press.

London, September 29. — A dispatch from Rome says that the Italian battleship Benedette Brin sank, following an explosion resulting from fire. The cause of the disaster is not known.

The announcement last night did not make clear whether the vessel had gone down. Eight officers and 379 marines, it was said, were rescued, and over 300 men are still missing.

By Associated Press.

Columbus, September 29. — State Dairy and Food Commissioner T. L. Calvert has ordered two Washington C. H. restaurants to clean up or stand prosecution.

The proprietors have agreed to place their restaurants in a sanitary condition in compliance with the law regulating public eating places.

By Associated Press.

By Associated Press.

New York, September 29. — Definite formation of the big syndicate of bankers who will float the half billion dollar credit loan to Great Britain and France, was begun today by J. P. Morgan & Company and others associated with them in the negotiations with the Anglo-French financial commission.

It is proposed to make the syndicate loan the largest of its kind ever seen in this country, and to include in its membership, banks, trust companies, and individuals from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

In every large city it was planned to have a group of bankers to act as syndicate managers in their section.

25,000 VETERANS MARCH IN REVIEW

By Associated Press.
Washington, September 29. — Historic Pennsylvania Avenue, up which the victorious Union army marched 50 years ago for review by President Andrew Johnson, was lined early today with thousands, who braved a sharp wind to see the remnant of that legion march from the capitol to the White House to be reviewed by President Wilson.

The grand parade and presidential review was the crowning event of the annual reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic. It was in commemoration of the grand review after the close of the civil war when 160,000 conquerors, of the army of the North, marched.

Today President Wilson greeted the survivors from the same spot where President Johnson stood. Estimates placed the number of veterans in line at from 20,000 to 30,000.

Pennsylvania Avenue was thronged with crowds rivalling inauguration times.

All government departments, public schools and practically all business houses were closed.

The line of march was from the Peace Monument up Pennsylvania Avenue, and through a court of honor erected in front of the White House.

At the head of the parade was Lieutenant General Nelson A. Miles, with distinguished army and navy officers as his aides.

Scenes of enthusiasm marked the passage of the veterans at President Wilson's stand. Frequently the president waved his hat.

The cheering in the reviewing stand in front of the White House was almost constant. Tired by the march, veterans looked exhausted when they reached the president's stand.

The parade was more than two hours in passing. As it progressed, some of the older veterans dropped from the lines.

The old soldiers marched nearly in the center of the broad avenue, while the ambulances spun along both sides.

Considering the advanced age of the men, there seemed few exhaustions.

Columbus, September 29. — Ohio has 1,298,656 enumerated school children between the ages of 6 and 21 this year, according to the State Public Instruction Department.

This is an increase of 27,000 over last year. There are 665,880 boys and 632,876 girls.

By Associated Press.

Circleville, Ohio, September 29. — Judge Aaron R. Van Cleef died here last night after a lingering illness, in his seventy-seventh year.

Judge Van Cleef was the senior Democratic editor in Ohio. He had attained many distinctions in his 77 years of life. His journalistic career began in 1859 and ended with his death.

For ten years he was a member of the Ohio Senate and he also served two terms in the House of Representatives, his career as a lawmaker extending from 1871 to 1893. During that time he voted upon the election of eight United States Senators in regular session and had part in choosing the successor to James A. Garfield when the latter was elected President and resigned his toga.

In local politics he had an unusual record. Elected a member of the Democratic County Committee of Pickaway County in 1864, he continued his connection with it until his death, omitting the year 1901.

He was chairman of the body from 1866, omitting a period of three years. In addition to serving as a member of the General Assembly he was Probate Judge of Pickaway county, being appointed to serve out an unexpired term, and being twice elected for terms of three years each.

Judge Van Cleef was a native of New Jersey. His birthplace was Arnytown, and his natal day in the year 1838. When 21 years of age he came to Ohio and secured control of the Georgetown Democrat Standard at the seat of Brown County, a paper that was later called the Brown County News-Democrat. Later he went to Lebanon, the seat of Warren County, and bought the Democratic Citizen. His course, a vigorous one, drew upon him the vengeance of his political opponents and on the night of August 1, 1862, his plant was wrecked by a mob. It was refitted and May 1, 1863, he resumed publication.

In November of that year he removed to Circleville and bought the Democrat, which was named the Democratic Watchman. This he continued to publish until his death.

Kipling Tells of Havoc Wrought by High Explosives in Alsace and How Villagers, Not Warned of Bombardment, Calmly Take Tea Amid Bursting Shells—Story Laid on Ground Where Bitter Fighting Rages Today.

We present below the fifth of six articles from the pen of Rudyard Kipling, under the general title of "France at War on the Frontier of Civilization," describing the impressions of a visit to the fighting line in France.

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

[Copyright, 1915, by the Sun Printing and Publishing Association.]

VERY early in the morning I met Alan Breck with a half bearded bullet scrape across the bridge of his nose and an Alpine cap over one ear. His people a few hundred years ago had been Scotch. He bore a Scotch name and still recognized the head of his clan, but his French occasionally ran into German words, for he was Alsatian on one side.

"This," he explained, "is the very best country in the world to fight in. It is picturesque and full of cover. I'm a gunner. I've been here for months. It's lovely."

It might have been the hills under Mussoorie, and what our ears expected to do in it I could not understand, but our demon driver, who had been a road racer, took the seventy horsepower Mercedes and threaded the narrow valleys as well as occasional half Swiss villages full of Alpine troops at a restrained thirty miles an hour. He shot up a new made road more like Mussoorie than ever and did not fall down the hillside even once. An ammunition mule of a mountain battery met him at a tight corner and began to climb a tree.

"There isn't another place in France where that could happen," said Alan. "I tell you this is a magnificent country."

The mule was hauled down by his tail after he had reached the lower branches and went on through the woods, his ammunition boxes jinking on his back for all the world as if he were rejoining his battery at Jutogh. One expected to meet the little hill people bent under their loads under the forest gloom. The light, the color, the smell of wood smoke, pine needles, wet earth and warm mule were all Himalayas. Only the Mercedes was violently and loudly a stranger.

Near the German Positions.

"Halt!" said Alan at last, when she had done everything except imitate the mule.

"The road continues," said the demon driver seductively.

"Yes, but they will hear you if you go on. Stop and wait. We've a mountain battery to look at."

They were not at work for a moment, and the commander, a grim, forceful man, showed me some details of their construction. When we left them in their bower it looked like a hill priest's wayside shrine. We heard them singing through the steep, descending pines. They, too, like the "75" men, seem to have no pet name in service.

It was a poisonously blind country. The woods blocked all sense of direction. Above and around the ground was at any angle you please, and all sounds were split up and muddled by the tree trunks, which acted as silencers. High above us the respectable, all concealing forest had turned into sparse, ghastly blue sticks of timber—an assembly of leper trees around a bald mountain top.

"That's where we're going," said Alan. "Isn't it an adorable country?"

Shots Are Exchanged.

A machine gun loosed a few shots in the fumbling style of her kind when they feel for an opening. A couple of rifle shots answered. They might have been half a mile away or a hundred yards below.

An adorable country! We climbed up till we found once again a complete tea garden; little sunk houses almost invisible in the brown pink recesses of the thick forest. Here the trenches began, and with them for the next few hours life in two dimensions—length and breadth.

You could have eaten your dinner almost anywhere off the swept dry ground, for steep slopes favored draining. There was no lack of timber, and there was unlimited labor. It had made neat, double length dugouts, where the wounded could be laid during their passage down the mountainside; well tended occasional latrines, properly lined dugouts for sleeping and eating, overhead protections and tool sheds where needed and, as one came nearer the working face, very clever cellars to protect against trench sweepers.

Men passed on their business—a squad with a captured machine gun, which they tested in a sheltered dip; armorers at their benches busy with sick rifles, fatigue parties for straw rations and ammunition, long processions of single blue figures turned sideways between brown, sunless walls. One understood after awhile the nightmare that lays hold of trench stale men until the dreamer, watching seemingly forever in those blind mazes, finds himself after agonizing centuries out again in the white blaze and horror of the mined front.

There were no trees above us now. Their trunks lay along the edge of the trench, built in with stones where necessary, or sometimes overhanging it in ragged splinters or bushy tops. Bits of cloth not French showed too in the uneven line of debris at the trench tip, and some thoughtful soul had marked an unexpected boche trench sweeper as not to be touched. It was a young lawyer from Paris who pointed that out to me.

Devastation Everywhere.

We met the colonel at the head of an indescribable pit of ruin, full of sunshine, whose steps ran down a very steep hillside under the lee of an almost vertically plunging parapet. To the left of that parapet the whole hillside was one ruin of smashed trees, split stones and powdered soil. It might have been a ragpicker's dump heap on a colossal scale. Alan looked at it critically. I think he had helped make it not long before.

"We are on the top of the hill now, and the boches are below," said he. "We gave them a very fair sickener lately."

"This," said the colonel, "is the front line."

There were overhead guards against hand bombs, which disposed me to believe him, but what convinced me most was a corporal urging us in whispers not to talk so loud. The men were at dinner, and a good smell of food filled the trench. This was the first smell I had encountered in my long travels up hill—a mixed, entirely wholesome flavor of stew, leather, earth and rifle oil. A proportion of men were standing to arms while others ate, but dinner time is slack time even among animals, and it was close to noon.

Boches Get Their Soup.

"The boches got their soup a few days ago," some one whispered. I thought of pulverized hillside and

hoped it had been hot enough.

We edged along the still trench where the soldiers stared with justified contempt. I thought, upon the civilian who scuttled through their life for a few emotional minutes in order to make words out of their blood. It reminded me of coming in late to a play and incommencing the long line of packed stalls. The whispered dialogue was much the same.

"Pardon; I beg your pardon, monsieur. To the right, monsieur. If monsieur will lower his head; one sees best from here, monsieur."

It was their day and night long business, carried through without display or heat or doubt or indecision.

Those off duty not five feet behind in the dugout were deep in their papers or their meals or their letters.

The Street to Millwood
It has been a pleasure for the people of this city, during the last two years, to contemplate the splendid work of the city council and the organizations of public spirited citizens, working together and in harmony, to bring about much needed public improvements. There has been much, in combined activities to praise and little or nothing to criticize. The results attained have been wonderfully satisfactory.

In the matter of securing the new union depot, the absolute need for which has long been acknowledged universally, it seems possible that the city council has moved with a little too much haste.

Everyone here wants the union depot and is content to have it located in that plot of land which now is a part of Paint street.

Before that portion of Paint street, necessary for depot purposes, however, was formally granted to the railroad, which means the closing up of that street, so far as the very necessary connecting link between the Millwood section and the uptown section of the city are concerned, some arrangement should have been made to provide a means for travel between the sections mentioned.

It is not wise for authorities acting finally upon such important matters to rely upon individual promises or assurances that the rights of the public will be provided for. In such instances the new rights of the public should be absolutely secured before a present right is bartered away, no matter how valuable the consideration received may be. The Millwood section is too important in the commercial and social life of the city to be cut off from it or even seriously inconvenienced in the necessary travels of its residents.

No one has any desire, at this time, to criticize the action of council even in the matter of the land grant for the new depot, but that other very necessary arrangement for that populous and prosperous section of the city the residents of which have traveled over the street proposed to be abandoned should have been made.

Before going much further every effort should be directed to the work of providing a thoroughfare between the city proper and Millwood.

The Allies Begin Attack

The great offensive drive of the allied armies of the English, Belgians and French on the western battle fronts of Europe has at last begun and marked advantages have been gained over the Teutonic forces.

The loss of men sustained by both contending forces has been terrific. Great numbers of prisoners have been taken by both forces, a large number of German guns were captured by the allies and some considerable amount of ammunition also passed under their control.

The most significant feature of the terrific fighting resulting from the offensive movements of the allies was the comparative ease with which the German trenches were taken. Those who contended that the armies of the central powers were secure from attack by reason of their extensive earth works must acknowledge themselves to have been mistaken. Under the furious bombardment of the allies directed against the entrenchments of the Germans, the forces of the Kaiser were, early in the fighting, compelled to retire.

The fighting in the west is an added proof of the contention that the present war is one of big guns and that fortifications are of little avail as against a direct attack by heavy artillery.

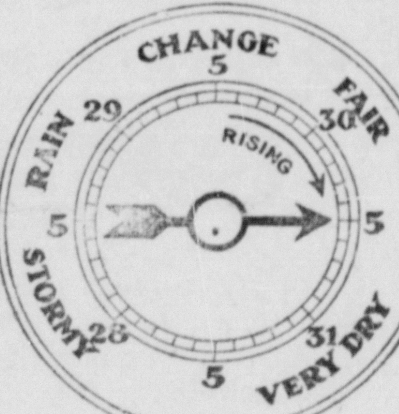

Germany's successes in Belgium, France, Galicia, Poland and Russia are directly attributable to the heavy artillery attacks against which the strongest fortifications crumble into ruins.

It remained for the allies, by an offensive attack in the west, to demonstrate by a concentration of heavy artillery fire that the most elaborate system of entrenchments are equally useless as a protection to the infantrymen.

The fighting of Monday was the most desperate of the present year and of the war, save only, possibly the offensive movements of the Germans in France last summer and the counter offensive of the allies before which the German forces were compelled to abandon their campaign to take Paris and retreat almost to the borders of Germany.

Poetry For Today
LITTLE IRISH GIRL.
As I went out one evening
From Tipperary town,
I met a little colleen
Among the heather brown.
"Ah," says I, "perhaps you're lonely?"
She tossed her pretty curl,
"Well, maybe, I prefer it!"
Och! the dear little girl.
Says I, "Perhaps you're married?"
Says she "Perhaps I'm not!"
Says I, "I'll be your gosssoon."
Says she, "I'll not be caught."
"Oh! your eyes are like the ocean,
And your heart is like a pearl!"
Says she, "Well, then I'll keep it!"
Och! the dear little girl.
Says I, "I've got a cabin
And pigs that number seven,
And oh! with you, mavourneen,
Sure the place would be like heaven."
Her eyes looked up in mine then,
My heart was in a whirl,
The little pigs had done it!
Och! the dear little girl.

Washington, Sept. 29. — Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, who has been devoting himself to safeguarding American cotton interests in the war situation, called on Acting Secretary of State Polk. Following the conference, the senator declared that the position of the cotton grower at present was satisfactory. He said that for the 12,000,000 bales of cotton raised this year the cotton growers would receive very much more than for the 16,000,000 bales grown last year. The senator expressed the view that after the submarine controversy with Germany had been completely cleared away the administration would act vigorously with reference to the British interference with American trade.

His government has responded to the complete satisfaction of the United States government's demand for his removal from Washington, and officials here regard the incident entirely closed. Dr. Dumba will sail from New York on Oct. 5. Announcement of Dr. Dumba's recall was received at the state department in a dispatch from Ambassador Penfield at Vienna, reporting a conversation he had had last week with Foreign Minister Burian. Acting Secretary of State Polk stated that the department has requested the British and French ambassadors here to provide a safe conduct for Ambassador Dumba, informing them that the ambassador had been recalled by his government. No mention was made by the foreign minister in his talks with Ambassador Penfield of any successor to Dr. Dumba. However, it is not doubted that in a reasonable time the name of a successor to Dr. Dumba will be submitted to the United States government.

DEEPLY INTERESTED IN TRADE DRAWING EVENTS

Success of Fall Festivals in Adjoining Towns Is Expected to Result in the Holding of Monster Carnival or "Farmers' Festival" in This City Next Fall.

Many local business and professional men have been watching with no little interest the success of the various Fall Festivals which have been held in adjoining towns and cities, and will also watch with equal interest the results in other cities where fall festivals are now under way or will be launched within the next few days.

And it is expected that, in all probability, Washington will hold a fall festival next season which will be equal to any held in other Ohio cities, and that Washington for one solid week will be the mecca for thousands of visitors, including many new shoppers who mayhap have not yet become familiar with the splendid advantages the local shops possess.

The matter of a festival or carnival was discussed by the Dutch Treat Club a few weeks ago, but it was deemed inadvisable at that late a day to plan a carnival such as was desired, and it was more than hinted that plans would be taken up early next year so that the farmers could plan for the biggest and best of everything, for which liberal prizes would be awarded.

Regarding the recent "Farmers' Fall Festival" held in Chillicothe, the Chillicothe News tells of the great success, as follows:

"The unanimous opinion of local exhibitors at the Fall Festival is that this event is the best thing for town and county that has ever been suggested and carried out. There have been a few people, mostly those who did not turn a hand or spend a dollar to boost the festival, who, during the early part of the week, went about proclaiming that fall festivals were 'played out.' By the end of the week even these were silent, if not convinced, for they found that general opinion was against them and enthusiastically in favor of the festival idea.

"Three years of festivals have proved their practical value. Not a visitor from other cities but commended it and saw what it was doing for the city.

"In Chillicothe the business men who exhibited are all thoroughly pleased with the result. Setting aside the fact that the week's business was fine, they all emphasize the fact that the festival affords a chance for them to welcome old patrons and to make possible new ones. They see distinctly a better feeling between town and county growing directly from such meetings brought about by the festivals. Old friends who had drifted away are coming back and new ones are made. While there are suggestions for possible improvements, there was an unanimous opinion that the Farmers' Fall Festival must be repeated next year, bigger and better."

Intentionary on a charge of arson, Mrs. Acton has been held in Ross county since she was arrested in this city at the time her husband was ordered out of town.

Bert and John Eubanks, Highland county wool thieves, also come up for investigation on a charge of stealing wool.

George Nagle is the last man bound over, the charge against him being that of cutting with intent to kill Frank Nevin.

GREAT PROGRESS MADE ON STREET

Much progress has been made on the paving of West Court street, during the past day or two, and the brick have all been laid from the intersection of Hinde street to the bridge over Paint creek.

The work of laying the brick between the rails of the C. H. & D. and D. T. & I. railroads required considerable skill.

The railroad crossings on West Court street, of which there are four, will be equal to the crossings on South Main and Fayette streets.

TURNS OVER ROADS TO SUPT. GROVE

County Highway Superintendent Grove is in receipt of a communication from the State Highway Commissioner in which he is notified to take charge of all the roads in the county under control of the state, and to superintend them subject to instructions from the State Highway Department.

The roads in question include the

brick highways and the Devalon road.

At the next meeting of the county commissioners the salary of the Highway Superintendent's office will be decided upon. In Pickaway county the salary, computed as required by law, totals $1725 per annum.

FINE PHOTO PLAY DELIGHTS AUDIENCES

The Palace Theater played to crowded houses Tuesday night, when an all-star Vitagraph cast put on "The Island of Regeneration."

Its claim of being the highest priced feature ever shown in this city was backed by its wonderfully beautiful and spectacular settings laid in the southern Pacific, and its intensely exciting and out of the ordinary drama. The leading parts were superbly acted by Edith Storey and Antonio Marino, well supported.

This afternoon's matinee was well patronized and the Palace will undoubtedly be packed tonight, the last chance to see this film.

FALL SALE OF WIDE INTEREST

The Spring Hill farm annual fall sale of immuned Durocs will be held at the farm on Tuesday, October the fifth, in charge of Mrs. Hugh K. Stewart and Miss Martin, Ex. estate of the late Hugh K. Stewart.

Catalogs have been sent out in which the announcement is made that it was the wish of Mr. Stewart to have the large number of high class Durocs on the farm at the time of his death disposed of as had been previously arranged, in two sales—this fall sale of open gilts and spring boars, and a closing out sale, February 1st, 1916.

Most of this offering is sired by Col. S. Jr., the intensely bred boar that was sold for $2500 at the last Spring Hill farm sale.

Miss Martin has been actively associated with Mr. Stewart in the conduct of former sales and she and Mrs. Stewart are thoroughly competent to manage the sale which promises to be an enormous one with the outlook for the coming season and the demand for high bred immuned Durocs.

Spring Hill farm has a national reputation and buyers will attend from all over the country.

EPISCOPAL CHURCH NOW WELL UNDER WAY

The work of erecting the new Episcopal church in this city is well under way, the material arriving this week and the work of erecting the structure being taken up immediately.

The material for the structure is in sections and the work of putting it together requires little time, and it is expected that by Sunday the building will be completed and ready for services.

Practically all of the building is of sheet steel and so constructed that each section fits perfectly in place, and when all are assembled, the structure is tight, attractive, and very serviceable.

MEMOIR.

Caroline Seifried was born in Lancaster, Ohio, July 30, 1846. Her parents, Adam and Barbara Seifried, were well known residents of that town. She was married in 1866 to William Hettessheimer, and for forty-five years has lived in Washington C. H.

Of the children three survive—William, Mrs. Addie Short and Mrs. Louise Clark. Also a sister, Mrs. Louisa Eberly of Lancaster, Ohio and a niece, Mrs. Charles Johnson, of this town.

Of Lutheran parentage, Mrs. Hettessheimer was baptized and confirmed in the Evangelical Lutheran church of Lancaster. On removing to Washington Court House she united with Grace Methodist Episcopal church, and until her death was a loyal and devoted member.

Mrs. Hettessheimer was in every sense of the word a mother. In rare measure she possessed the mother spirit. Her devotion to her children and grandchildren was notable.

The little duties of the home engaged much of her time and her fidelity to the daily task was bravely met. She was cheerful by nature, and patient under the burdens of life.

When sickness came she met it with the same unflinching spirit. No complaint escaped her lips. Her faith was strong, her hope bright. As her strength failed she gathered courage for the great adventure. Again and again she spoke of the Savior's presence and the heavenly home. She met the last summons without fear or misgiving, and in perfect trust she fell asleep in Jesus in the full assurance of faith.

American Financiers to Furnish Half Billion.

AGREEMENT IS ANNOUNCED

Money to Remain in the United States and Be Utilized in Steadying Foreign Exchange Between This Country and Great Britain and France—Statement of the Anglo-French Commissioners.

New York, Sept. 29.—Sir Henry Babington Smith, member of the Anglo-French mission, made formal announcement of the agreement of American financiers to furnish $500,000,000 whereby foreign exchange between the United States and England and France is to be maintained at normal figures. It came in the form of a statement from the lord chief justice of England, Baron Reading, who is now in Chicago.

The announcement, which was supplemented later by a statement from J. P. Morgan & Co., sets forth in brief:

"An underwriting syndicate of bankers and individual financiers from all sections of the country is to supply a credit to the two countries of $480,000,000, which is to remain in the United States, to be utilized solely for the purpose of keeping the foreign exchange at the normal price. In return, the two countries are to issue joint and several bonds due in five years, bearing 5 per cent interest, for the full amount of $500,000,000. The price at which these bonds are to be sold to the investor will be 98 and the price at which the syndicate is to receive them is 96, making the interest return to the investor about 5.5 per cent, the premium to the investor being $10,000,000 and the commission to the syndicate being $10,000,000 more.

One of the first questions asked

was as to the participation of Russia in the loan, and the reply was that she does not appear as a party or a participant. The next was in regard to munitions. The answer was that the money is to be used exclusively for the purpose of stabilizing exchange; that is, preventing bills drawn on foreign countries from depreciating. This meant any and all bills that might be drawn. It would mean the wheat bills, the cotton bills, as well as bills on manufactures.

It has not yet been decided definitely how many payments will cover the loan. They are to be arranged for upon calculation of how often they will be needed. It was explained that 25 per cent might be required with the subscription, more or less.

It is intended to have a group in every center of the country, where one can be organized, to handle the loan. New York city will be the center of the groups, and so far forty banking institutions have signified their willingness to join. Bonds in denomination as low as $100 will be offered.

BANK BOYCOTT IS THREATENED

Washington, Sept. 29.—A boycott of banks participating in the $500,000,000 loan to the allies is proposed in a statement issued by the executive committee of the National Industrial Peace conference, of which Former Representative Fowler of Illinois is chairman. The movement is also endorsed by G. F. Hummel of Chicago, representing the Business Men's Peace association.

ATTEMPT MADE TO WRECK SHIP

New York, Sept. 29.—An apparent attempt to blow up the liner San Guglielmo, which sailed from Brooklyn with 1,700 Italian reservists and a cargo of war munitions, is being investigated. Shortly before the vessel left her pier eight sticks of dynamite, each five inches long and an inch thick, sufficient to destroy the ship, were discovered under a pile of sack- ing by Leo Pavone, head dock clerk.

SLIGHT SKIRMISH

Washington, Sept. 29.—Another skirmish between American marines and Haitians was reported to the navy department by Rear Admiral Caperton, commanding. One cacao chief was killed in the fighting, which occurred near Cape Haitien.

AFTER LOAFERS

Marion, O., Sept. 29.—Loafers who refuse to cut corn at $2 a day and board will be sent to the workhouse. This edict was issued by Mayor Don Brockett. Farmers say their corn has reached a stage where it must be cut immediately to save the fodder, and they are unable to get corn cutters.

BRYAN DECLARES HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE

Stoutly Opposes Proposed Loan to the Allies.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 29.—William J. Bryan declared here that he would not seek the Democratic presidential nomination next year, that he was undecided about going to Europe as private peace envoy, and he strongly opposed the proposed loan of $500,000,000 or any other sum to finance Great Britain and France.

"I am not a candidate and will not be a candidate for the nomination," Mr. Bryan said with a tone of finality that left no doubt that neither does he expect to seek the nomination nor does he expect the nomination to seek him. Then he added: "I

Mr. Bryan then spoke in opposition to the loan to the allies: "It would not be wise for our country to give encouragement to a war loan on either side. In the first place, it tends to give the influential element in our country a pecuniary interest in the success of the side to which the loan is made, and as they naturally want to protect their investments, it throws their influence against that neutrality which our government is bound to preserve. The money that is invested in these bonds will be withdrawn from the money available for investment in other things and will tend to make money scarce in some sections. As a matter of business, it is hardly to be expected that our people will take war risks that were refused by the people in Europe."

EXPLOSION WRECKS ITALIAN BATTLESHIP

Admiral and Hundreds of Crew Lose Lives.

Rome, Sept. 29.—The first class Italian battleship Benedetto Brin was literally torn to pieces by an internal explosion while lying at anchor in the harbor at Brindisi. Only 378 men and eight officers of her entire complement of 720 were saved. This makes the casualty list total 344 officers and men. Rear Admiral Rubin de Celvin, who was in command of the ship, is among the dead.

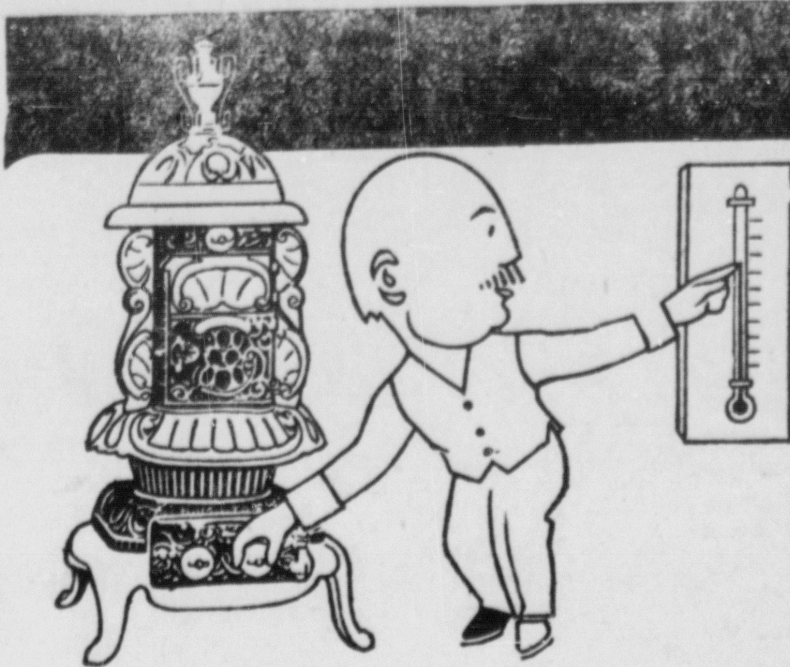

The admiralty, in briefly announcing the accident, dispels all suspicion that a hostile submarine may have been responsible for the explosion by revealing that it was due to a slight internal fire which reached the magazines before it could be extinguished. There was no time, however, for warning to be given the men, and no attempt was made to lower boats. An enormous detonation sounded: the boat split open, a cloud of smoke shot into the air, and a few minutes later the spot where the Benedetto Brin had been riding was marked only by struggling bodies and floating debris.

The battleship Benedetto Brin was a vessel of 13,427 tons and in peace times carried a complement of 720 men. She was completed in 1904 at a cost of $5,750,000. The battleship, which was of the dreadnaught class, carried four 12-inch, four 8-inch and twelve 6-inch guns, twenty 12-pounders, two 1-pounders and two Maxims. She also was armed with four torpedo tubes. The vessel had a speed of about 20.5 knots. Rear Admiral Baron Ernesto Rubin de Celvin was in command of the vessel.

REPUBLICANS WILL SUPPORT GERRYMANDER

Columbus, Sept. 29.—Under the direction of Chairman Edwin Jones the Republican state executive committee will make an organized and vigorous campaign to sustain the Sprague congressional redistricting law, which the Democratic state organization, by petition, has subjected to referendum vote. This determination was reached at a meeting in Republican state headquarters, attended by Republicans from each of the twenty-two congressional districts.

In a statement Chairman Jones said: "The Democratic organization has caused a referendum to be taken on this measure to the exclusion of all other acts passed by the general assembly, thus making the issue one of a strictly partisan character. It was unanimously determined to accept the challenge of the Democratic organization."

Pressmen Meet.

Columbus, Sept. 29.—Plans are now under way for the organization of a state league of pressmen, linking the 5,000 or more pressmen of Ohio into a body independent of the international federation, and a permanent association will be perfected at a meeting in Columbus Oct. 16 and 17. One of the principal purposes of organizing the league is to establish a state labor exchange for pressmen.

It was Miss Tanner's first tour of inspection in this city. She will be back within a short time to see if all parties have complied with the law.
